The Female in The Attic

24 August 2010, written by Q.S.

28 August 2010, revised by K.

The police department in Aupad is dealing with a terrible case of domestic violence. The victim is a young woman who was being abused by her husband. The torture started right after the wedding. The husband imprisoned his wife in the attic of an old house, which once belonged to his parents. He gave her nothing to eat or drink and kept her from getting any sleep. Fortunately, after a few days, the torturer had made a mistake by not locking the door to the attic well enough and the poor woman managed to escape. He was arrested by the police few hours later. When asked why he had done it, he said that his wife was too stubborn and not at all obedient and he had to teach her how to behave properly.

Yorkers Out

27 August 2010, written by A.

The Bosworth Polo Tournament already knows its winner. The youngest son of the third Duke of York and his team (usually called the Yorkers) lost the final match to the team of the Earl of Richmond. The tight match was decided by an ugly accident. One of the Yorkers hit his own team leader with his mallet. The Duke fell off his horse and got injured. Fortunately, the injury was not too serious. While waiting for medics, he even cracked a joke calling out loudly "My Duchy for a horse!" Nevertheless, his team was defeated after this. Fans of "gentlemen polo" were very pleased with this result, since the Yorkers had been playing too callous (and sometimes almost unfair) to get to the finals.

General

30 August 2010, written by E.F.

In a tragic way ended a seemingly happy marriage of a general (for his important military position, his name should not be revealed) on Cyprus.

His wife was strangled to death and the general, after injuring one of his ensigns, was found stabbed with a dagger. While some details about the first tragic death are still unclear, the general's death was confirmed to be a suicide. Police tries to find out motives behind this tragedy. Personal problems between the couple seem to be most likely the cause for this. However, racism has not been completely ruled out either.

Murder

25 August 2010, written by B.F.

Yesterday, the son of the recently deceased director of Arnkmed company openly accused his uncle (his father's brother) of murdering his father. However, there is no evidence of the crime being committed. Police, as well as the rest of the family, are convinced that the death of the old man was natural and that the allegation is just another way how to show the son's disapproval to the marriage of his mother to his uncle.

Brutal Defeat

29 August 2010, written by H.

We have recently informed you about the unstable political situation in More, which culminated in a brutal assassination of the current leader Raasec.

After not getting any support from the people, the main participants of the whole conspiracy against the reign had escaped from the country. Still refusing to accept their defeat, they had formed an army and returned to take over the control with military force. Yesterday morning their army was defeated. The leaders committed suicide, probably in fear of the trial.
